My dear Sir,

I cannot resist giving you a line to say how unexpectedly delighted I have been with your Indicator which I have just read — It is quite unequalled in the delicacy — the grace the wit — the beautiful thread running that you have bestowed upon it — Pray continue in that vein — and I am quite sure you will add most largely to your fame. — I also feel anxious to know you have settled with Bentley — the last time I saw him I asked him very feelingly — but he said that nothing was as yet concluded. — I cannot help fancying that you might strike out something very new — not precisely a Novel — but with a secret satire in it - a sort of Gallerien - or Isle of the Tub or Table of the Bees - some passages in the present Indicator pleas have you would Execute it if you once hit on the Conception - In fact I think the Age would catch at something great in the way I mean - the present we shpo too much in the beaten track - we don't dare enough.

Forgive all this - and with kindest wishes

Believe me
Ever truly
